The statement may not exceed fifty words and must be submitted to the chief clerk on the same day the member returns.

Rule ((20)) 21. Notice of a motion for reconsideration on the final passage of bills shall be made on the day the vote to be reconsidered was taken and before the house has voted to transmit the bill to the senate.

Any member who voted on the prevailing side may move for reconsideration or give notice thereof.

A motion to reconsider can be decided only once when decided in the negative.

ELECTION OF THE SPEAKER

Representative J. Johnson moved that Representative Laurie Jinkins be elected for the Office of Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Representative J. Johnson: "Thank you, Mr. Chief Clerk. It is my honor to nominate for the speaker, the gentle lady from the twenty-seventh district. She's known for being a persuasive speaker. But she's also eager to listen and to learn. To listen and to learn from historically marginalized communities. And she's committed to do the work necessary during this pandemic. In a time of great stress and division and polarization, she is the best person to guide us towards racial equity, public health, economic recovery and climate justice. Opportunity, equity and justice. These are more than just words to her. These are actions. In this moment, we need bold, decisive leadership. And that is why I am proud to stand here today and nominate the gentle lady from the twenty-seventh district. Thank you."

Representative Kretz moved that Representative J.T. Wilcox be elected for the Office of Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Representative Kretz: "Thank you, Mr. Chief Clerk. We're in a time of storms in our nation. A lot of division. We're seeing things we've never seen. We've seen strife, on a state and a federal level like we have not seen before. And this is just a thought, that maybe we try something different here in the state of Washington. I think about what it would be if we had a legislature that did things a little bit different. Maybe we just found fifty members from both parties and made a decision? We could do that on speaker. I think about the rules committee that was more functional where your voice and your vote counted more. Think about going out and finding fifty people to pass a bill. It's just like what we're doing right now. If there's fifty people that want to support this? We could do something really different. And it just seems like a different atmosphere in times like this could be pretty useful in navigating these tough times. With the challenges we're facing with both COVID and with our economy. So, I would close with I feel really good about Representative Wilcox. I think he showed a steady hand in our caucus. I know he's a straight shooter from lots of personal experience. And I'm proud to nominate Representative Wilcox for Speaker. Thank you."

SPEAKER'S REMARKS

Madame Speaker: "Washingtonians, members of the House, we are in the hardest of times. Hard for Washington families. For our businesses. For our teachers and students. For those most in need. For those hurt by systemic racism. And for those committed to our representative democracy. But in these hard times, hope is on the horizon. Hope because of vaccines. Hope because public health workers never rest. Hope because people are wearing masks, social distancing and applying innovation to every single thing they do. Hope because our representative democracy was put to the test of sedition last week and resisted it. Showing our weakness, but more importantly our strength. Our job for every minute of the next one hundred and five days is not just to keep hope alive for the people of our great state, but to make hope a reality. So let's start working right now and all session long. To deliver hope and turn these hardest of times into a recovery that is equitable, that is inclusive, and that is sustainable. Let's get to work right now."

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Representative Wilcox: "Thank you, Madame Speaker. And congratulations. I know you are going to work for all of Washington for the next one hundred five days and maybe more, who knows? I'd just like to share one of the worst calls I've ever had in my life. Many of us have had bad news and phone calls. Sometimes it's expected, sometimes it's a total surprise. And it was with someone who's in the chamber here. My very good friend and this is not a professional courtesy, this is heartfelt. The good representative from the thirteenth legislative district. And I called up to ask him how he was doing. And in a voice that immediately caused a great sense of despair in my heart because it was so weak. He said, 'I'm doing fine J.T. but I'm in ICU.' That was a bad call. And it just illustrates the things that are happening to us, all around. The impact of COVID has divided us like nothing ever has before. I tell people that anything that isn't perfect is ten times harder because of COVID. And one of the things that divides us is that it's impacts are so uneven. We know that the impact of the disease itself in terms of mortality rates and bad outcomes that can affect people for the rest of their lives, is very uneven. It strikes people that are older. Strikes people that have other health challenges. And it strikes some ethnic groups much harder than others. Madame Speaker, the members of the House Republican Caucus represent many of those people. And we are very concerned. The other thing that divides us, is the fact that the burden and the cost of COVID is falling so unevenly as well. For many of us, the paycheck continues. The job might be modified but it's still there. You have a sense of belonging. A sense of being needed. But for others in our economy, a narrow group, all of those things are gone. The work is gone. Sometimes the thing that you spent your whole life building is gone or nearly gone. And Madame Speaker, I am so happy that we are here to work on these things. We're here for the people of Washington. I wish we would have been here long before now. But we're here now and we are ready to go to work. We hope that we can see immediate action to help even out the burdens and to relieve the burdens that people clear across Washington are bearing because of COVID and our reaction to COVID. Madame Speaker, many in my caucus are as concerned as you are, about the recent events in our country. The violence. The breakdown in civil order. It's been happening all year. It isn't just one day. I think everyone expects us, even though things are ten times harder in a time of COVID, to be better. Madame Speaker, we have a lot of security around us today. One thing that we've got to remember, in the middle of all of this, and it's hard when you've got these people that are here to protect the building, it's not about us, Madame Speaker. It's not about our egos. It's not about our individual agendas or even our party agendas. It's about every single person in the state of Washington that's bearing a burden that is much harder than it used to be. We have to do everything that we can to give them faith. To let them know that they have a voice. We won't always win. We certainly don't always win here.

But they have a voice. And it's important for every single one of us, majority or minority, to recognize that. And honor that. Madame Speaker, we are all ready to get to work. That was a great speech that you made about 'it's time to get to work.' And it's not just about the policies here. It's about figuring out how to rebuild trust. How to be better than we've been. How to reject name calling, shaming. All of the empty things that have been tried and tried and tried for the last several years. It's time to recognize that there's one thing that each one of us have control over. And that's the example that we project to people clear across the state. And there could be no more important time to do that. Because I don't think anyone doubts now, that the future of our families, the future of this institution, the future of Washington and the future of our country is at stake. It's not about us. It's about those things. Let's be the best example that we can. Thank you, Madam Speaker."
