The President Pro Tempore welcomed and introduced Sam Green, the Washington State's Poet Laureate, who was seated at the rostrum.

With permission of the Senate, business was suspended to allow Washington State Poet Laureate Sam Green read one of his poems.

REMARKS BY SAM GREEN

Sam Green: "Thank you Madam President, Senators, guests. I just turned sixty imagine my surprise to find myself at sixty. After a life of what I thought was rebellious youth, more conservative and more old fashion than I ever expected to be. One of the things that has happened is that I realized I've actually spent a life time listening to my elders when what I thought I was doing was spending a life time rebelling against them. Since 1982 I've lived in a tiny Island in the San Juan's. One of those that's off the grid. My wife and I haven't had electricity for twenty-six years. We have an awful lot of old neighbors and one of the first things we had to do was to talk to them about how to survive in such a place. I was walking one day around some fields with one of the elders and I asked him how the stones got around the edges. There are huge piles of stones everywhere. Where did these come from? I said. So, he told me and after listening to this story, which is essentially about how they got rid of big rocks I realized he just given me a life lesson.

Exemplar

When the old timers cleared their fields for the plow
They sometimes found boulders too big for horse and skid
They covered these over with brush and waited for weathers safe enough to burn then lugged sea water in buckets up the steep bluff from the beach and poured it over the hot rock which would rapidly hiss, contract and split
They did this again and again until the stones were small enough to manage. These they hauled or tossed to the boundaries of their lives work.
The seeds they broadcast with their best faith upon the turned earth against the coming push of frost.
So I asked him afterwards, 'Wait a minute. You mean you have to do it again?' He says, 'Oh yeah, it happens all the time.
The problem's not the problem. The problem is knowing how to solve the problem. Once you have that, it's all gravy.' Thank you very much.

MOTION

At 10:24 a.m., on motion of Senator Eide, the Senate adjourned until 12:00 noon, Thursday, February 5, 2009.
