While not everything impressed them, young people can be very discerning customers, there were moments of true wonderment as they stood and looked at the high ceiling, at the rostrum, and learned more about what we do here. I share that awe each morning as I walk into the doors. This storied place has housed historical decisions, protecting women's rights, expanding Medicaid to those like my family who desperately needed help, creating financial aid options for first generation students like me, students like our recent gubernatorial appointment Yazmin Aguilar, students like those who visited me this week who otherwise might not be able to access higher education. I'm here on this floor serving alongside you because this body has made brave decisions in an effort to make Washington work better for all of us residents. To extend the power of economic opportunity to more of us and to ensure that we have broader access to democracy. I stand here as the first queer woman elected to this body, the youngest serving member, the first woman of color from my district, because this body has worked alongside our neighbors to continue opening doors. I'm honored to serve here with you as this body looks more and more like the community members we represent. I am honored to be someone that young people who haven't before seen themselves in the halls of power can look up to so that this career becomes one alongside professional soccer player, doctor, teacher, magician that young folks can imagine for themselves. We know that representation is not enough. We know that there are still folks in our community of all ages who are facing tough seemingly insurmountable challenges. The young people who visited me this week may not yet be voters but they're struggling and they and their families need us to act. They are facing expensive health challenges, bullying and discrimination in and outside of school, the tough reality of living in a rural district lacking the transportation infrastructure investments they need, making it harder to get to school, to their first job, to their doctor's appointments. These young people, these future voters and Washingtonians across our state are depending on us to continue making brave decisions. Decisions about what to fund, which policies to pass, how to balance personal freedom with the common good. Let us always feel comfortable asking questions and generous when answering them. Let us always be respectful of opposing viewpoints and let us be guided by the desire to do right by our neighbors. In the spirit of gracious cooperation and as a reminder of the fact that our words in this chamber live on forever in the public record, in the laws we pass and in the legacy we leave I offer you this gift. It is a collaboration from two local artists in my community. An image that reflects the natural beauty of our Salish Sea and is inscribed with the words, 'The words you speak become the house you live in'. Thank you."

The President asked the Senate to join him in welcoming Senator Emily Randall to the Washington State Senate.

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Senator Liias: "Thank you Mr. President. Earlier today, when I spoke about Ambassador Levine's commitment to public service I noted that it is awe inspiring to see amazing accomplished people enter public service and Mr. President I would add Senator Randall to that list. In her very brief tenure on this planet, she's a bit younger than me, she has already accomplished some amazing things as an advocate for healthier communities, as a, at the front lines of raising money to fight the AIDS crisis in in the United States, as an accomplished graduate of Wellesley College and it's inspiring to see her take that commitment and drive and passion and come into public service. I think not enough younger people in our state, I think Mr. President, you and I are the rare exception of young inspired motivated people that have come into public service, so it's inspiring to see someone even more accomplished than us joining us and hopefully out shining us over the course of her tenure. And I just, as a member of the LGBT caucus, also want to note that this is our first queer member of the legislature. And I think for members of the legislature who come from previous generations that term queer carries a lot of connotations and meaning and I know that Senator Randall has already helped educate some of our members but I think over the course the next few weeks and months we will all learn about what it means to be queer in Washington in 2019 and I encourage you to have those conversations with Senator Randall and other members of our LGBT community to understand the many identities of the many representations we see both here in the legislature and across the state. I just want to lend my voice and saluting her and welcoming her to the Senate and I look forward to many years of service with her."

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Senator Takko: "Yeah, I also would like to welcome the new senator and I thought that was a very powerful speech and I really appreciated it. But, in my advancing years, my age, or my ears don't work quite as well and she said the children. I'm just kind of wondering if you could clarify? She said that the children were excited to see and I wasn't sure if she said rostrum or restroom. I wonder if she could clarify that for me?"

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT

President Habib: "I take that personally Senator Takko. I don't know. Wow. Thank you again to Senator Randall and just a reminder to all senators because I know it was a long interim and I know we've got a number of new members. Just a reminder to everyone to refrain from reading your remarks. And, also, to address the President when giving a floor speech on the Senate, even a point of personal privilege. Also, don't, don't call us the restroom up here. I think those are a few reminders."

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Senator Darneille: "Thank you Mr. President. You know the prime sponsor of the bill we've just passed is, has, brings a lot of new strange ideas to the legislature and I'm, I really want to just, I think the bill was a good bill but I wanted to make sure we understood that this is a person who rejected all the furniture in his office. He cleaned out his office. He's actually had the temerity to put his desk in the place where the Legislative Assistant should be having his or her office and he's instead relegated them to this big office where they have to share space. And he's got his office full of things like Swedish furniture and televisions, junk food, toys. It is just actually amazing to see this lack of respect for our traditions here in the Senate. So, I just wanted to warn everyone about that. But, I also wanted to say, if I could Mr. President, that Senator Nguyen is the vice chair for the Human Services Re-entry & Rehabilitation Committee and I could not have lucked out any better than to have a vice chair with his kind of integrity, great ideas, his commitment to improving everything about the justice system for people here in Washington State, as well as caring for children and immigrant families. He's just, he's so assured and so knowledgeable about this place and how his values will be spoken of and respected for years to come because of the kind of person that he is and I'm just honored to know him. Thank you Mr. President."

THIRTY EIGHTH DAY, FEBRUARY 20, 2019

2019 REGULAR SESSION

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Senator Fortunato: "I have a question. I would like to know how you get WIN out of N-G-U-Y-E-N? I mean, really. It should be Senator 'Naguyen.' So I mean, that is just my question. So, maybe the senator would like to address that issue."

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Senator Keiser: "My point is that Senator Nguyen is a disrupter. You know what he has done? He has put a table outside of his office. He's moving, he's encroaching into the ante-, the hallway, and he's put a table there. He put fresh flowers on that table. He has an electronic sign in machine, right there. And then you go in that office and he has a picnic table. Please. What kind of senator will he be?"

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT

President Habib: "Senator Keiser, I believe the warning about placing flowers on desks is a very important one in this body for any new senator to receive."

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Senator Schoesler: "Mr President I'm going to work really hard to learn to spell and pronounce member new guy's name. And hopefully by the end of this session he will be able to pronounce and spell my name."

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Senator Saldaña: "Well, for me having Senator Nguyen joining this prestigious place as the state senator of my most precious people in my life, my parents, my brothers and where my children play and go into my every day, in the 34th Legislative District. I could not ask for a better representative and state senator for my, my family, so I just want to thank you already for the work that, I thank the new senator for the representation he's already done. We share an alma mater, both for high school and college and, and so he's a little bit younger, but it has been really great to have someone that was raised and knows my community so well and is committed to really making sure that everyone is represented and that, and he takes the time to understand the different stories that, and that, and the different heritages that he has the privilege to represent. And I know that that is the intent of everyone in this floor and I hope that we will make note of that as we move forward."

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Senator Wellman: "Well, I just find it very interesting that Senator Nguyen has brought forth a bill about juvenile diversion because as someone of my age I find someone of his juvenile status very diverting. You, we have heard about his office and I certainly, actually think that everyone should go over and experience, you know, kind of this new way of doing business, which is very progressive. But, I also find it very unusual that the new senator has risen at his desk to speak. He's standing still and speaking at his desk. For those of you who have been on social media, this man is walking and talking constantly. One video after another. I think that we don't have any worry or fear for not being represented in the media this man is on the media every single day multiple times and so I think he will be a great addition to this body. Thank you."

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Senator Braun: "Thank you Mr. President. So, I just want to say that I believe Senator Nguyen is finally comfortable here. For the first time, I think this is week six of the session, he didn't greet me as Senator Braun. He actually greeted me by my first name, which is very pleasing and means that he's comfortable. He started to do good work here and I'm very happy to have him. Thank you Mr. President."

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Senator Nguyen: "Thank you Mr. President. First, I just want to say thank you to everybody so much for the hospitality and grace that you've shown me in the past few, to members of the body, for the past few months of hospitality and grace. You know, as a poor kid from South Seattle, that's actually kind of intense to get used to all the marble in this building. I've never seen a bathroom lined with marble walls before, so that's kind of an interesting dynamic for me. In commemoration of my first floor speech, I offer a humble gift. It is a black and white depiction of hope over peonies. Created by a White Center artist named Stephanie Mi. Symbolically, for folks who don't know, peonies represents not just hope, but honor and compassion as well. All traits I know each of us try to model in our representing of the people in Washington state. More importantly, peonies represents a tradition offering, a traditional offering of longevity in marriages and I want to take a moment to thank my wife. She's not actually here. We have two young kids, breaking nap time is not a good idea. But, she's watching on TVW. I just want to say thank you for her love and support through all of this. In fact peonies, there's a lesser known fact about them as well, they remedy headaches. In case you ever need it. I'd recommend taking a dose about twenty minutes before Transportation Committee. And speaking, and speaking of Transportation Committee you'll notice that my second gift is actually, you'll be receiving a, now, it's a pint of Lucille I.P.A. from Georgetown Brewing Company. And, although the brewing company itself is not in my district, the owners are and that's close enough for me. And there's no symbolism of the beer. It is just good beer and I wanted to share. So you're welcome. You're welcome. But, in all seriousness, I really wanted to talk about where I came from and kind of our shared moment now. Yesterday I was fortunate enough to have lunch with a few of the pages downstairs from my district and we were talking about the state of politics in 2019 and I was so impressed by their story of optimism and hope and how they were going to make a big difference here. In fact, one of them became a page after experiencing the political process this past year at a candidates form and she mentioned that she loved the engagement from her community and was so inspired. But there was actually one point that kind of stuck out with me in fact that there was a bit of hostility in some and some of the questions that came from the audience which is unfortunate. And I don't think it's much of a surprise that skepticism in government seems to be at an all time high but honestly this is not new, especially in the communities where I was raised. So I'm from Whitecenter and in White Center we've always felt ignored. It's a community where, despite its richness in people and culture and, of course, the food, we have a good Salvadoran bakery there, we've been historically left out of the conversation. We've been the subject of decision making and rather than being the decision makers ourselves. And that's a feeling that more and more Washingtonians have with every passing year that they don't have a voice and even when they stand up and shout oftentimes nobody is listening. And so often, the shouting has gotten louder and the reason why I'm here is that I believe that there is hope. And I actually saw it this past summer going door to door in my hometown and seeing the excitement on people's faces as I knocked on their door. And it wasn't because I was at their door. It was because someone like me, that looked like them was showing up at their door. I happen to be the first Vietnamese senator, of Vietnamese decent, in this body and it matters. That is because when we work with our constituents in this age of cynicism, I believe that we should join each other's hands and lead with conviction and really admit to our fellow Washingtonians that sometimes things are broken but that we can actually fix this together. Before being elected, I've actually visit the capitol a few times and I've always felt a sense of awe knowing that I stood in the presence of tremendous history. And as you know, to get to the wings and onto the floor you need to be escorted on, then to be a guest of this space. Obviously, now, things are very different. When I first walked onto the floor for the first time as a senator a few months ago I remember looking around and waiting for somebody to stop me because usually you have staff watching. And after realizing that nobody's going to stop me, I took about five steps and I was hit by a wave of emotion. And it finally occurred to me what it meant for someone like me, for someone from White Center, to be here. We are no longer just guests in a space where I once felt unworthy of occupying. I will always remember this time and I will never forget the sacrifices made by so many before me that allowed me to be here. So, thank you Mr. President for the time and members of the Senate for this opportunity."

The President congratulated Senator Nguyen and asked the Senate to join him in welcoming the new senator.
